Tina, who is Australian, has been designing in the UK for 32 years and has worked on a variety of projects both residential and commercial in England, Scotland and Europe. With a highly creative and intuitive understanding of her client's needs she creates unusual, harmonious and unique spaces. Her solutions are always entirely practical and stylish with difficult areas a real challenge. She works with contemporary and classic materials and is always at the forefront of new products and new trends. Extensive hands on experience ensures that projects are managed to a successful completion. Tina does not do anything soft, that is soft furnishings, she only does architectural designing including bathrooms, kitchens, lighting and space formation.

Tina McFarlane is the Project Manager of the BIDA Showhouse for the fourth year running. This year she has two assistants helping her. Tina is primarily a designer and been in designing in the UK for 32 years, but has been working as a project manager for the past eight years alongside her design business. She has studied Project Management and Building Surveying at Reading University as a distant learning student. This has given her great knowledge of the 'building' and enhanced her designs towards practical completion.

The role of Project Manager means to be involved in all aspects and areas from concept to completion. This includes design, technology, construction, contract administration, management, Health & Safety and last but not least liaison between all the designers and the organisers on this occasion or between client, structural engineers, contractors, local authorities.
